“ Eddie Nancy Miller lit a candle in memory of Mrs. Lucille Rider

Eddie Nancy Miller - February 15, 2011 at 07:03 AM

“ It was that "Wiggins blood," I guess; that special blood line that ran through our veins; that bond of love that brought us all joy when we took the time to be together or to simply cherish the thought of being there. Ernest and Annie Mae, Everette and Gladys, Joe and Ethel, and all their other siblings and spouses of that golden generation; they were all in the Wiggins family!

I remember the blissful joy of hearing the childhood tales of the next generation of Cille, James, Jack, Lelia, and Pat's capers with my Mom Ollie Mae and her siblings Arthur, Alex, Willie Mae, Shirley, Ebbie, Jerry, Linda, Larry, and Barbara. Over the years, more generations and more miles - and less time and less touch - seemed to pull us apart and make us more like strangers than blood kin.

How will the youth of our own children and grandchildren know the joy and pride and blessings of that Wiggins blood? It will only be known to them if we -each of us - strengthen the tie that binds; if we let them know - with honesty, transparency, forgiveness, and lots of love and nurturing - that the Wiggins blood runs through our veins and that is the most wonderful blessing in the world. We remember Cille and her special place in the world; what she gave, and what she left us. Now, it is up to us to keep our Wiggins family together, to keep it what we all want and need it to be.

With sincere love and sympathy,

“ My deepest sympathy to the family. I had met Lucille very briefly a couple of times and she made such an impression on me. She was a matriarch and kept her family close. Everybody that knew her will miss her. She was unforgettable.
